Karen Doherty

Karen Doherty has over 25 years experience as an environmental organizer, program director and marketing executive. She graduated from Trinity College in Washington, DC in 1974 and moved to Juneau, Alaska where she lived and worked for several years. Ms. Doherty was recognized for her work on the Congressional passage of Alaska lands legislation by the Alaska Chapter of the Sierra Club. After returning to the "Lower 48," Ms. Doherty worked in the membership department and designed and implemented executive education programs for the American Management Association, including the Management Course for Presidents.

Since 2000, Ms. Doherty has been vice president for marketing for Exaclair, Inc., a U.S. subsidiary of a French corporation that manufactures fine stationery, agendas, notebooks and art supplies. Ms. Doherty specializes in designing web-based sales and marketing strategies and publicity campaigns to promote the company's brands and products.

"My great-grandfather was a ship's carpenter, arriving in this area from Norway in the 1870s. I'm sure he would have made use of these lighthouses during his many voyages. It's very special to be able to support preservation of our maritime heritage and also connect with my own family history at the same time."
